What is HQHVSN?

High quality, high volume, spay / neuter (HQHVSN), is an evidence-based approach combining surgical techniques, anaesthetic protocols and operational workflows that improve efficiency while maintaining high standards of patient care.

The model has been refined over decades and supported by millions of procedures worldwide.

Learn from an internationally recognised HQHVSN educator

Dr Becky Morrow is an internationally recognised shelter medicine and HQHVSN practitioner with extensive experience training veterinary teams throughout the United States and internationally in efficient, evidence-based feline desexing techniques.

"HQHVSN isn't about cutting corners. It's about improving efficiency while maintaining excellent patient care."

Qualification Highlights

- DVM
- Graduate Certificate Veterinary Forensics
- Graduate Certificate Shelter Medicine
- Master of Science
- Certified Animal Welfare Administrator (CAWA)
- Assistant Teaching Professor – Penn State University
- Adjunct Assistant Professor – University of Florida College of Veterinary Medicine
- President and Medical Director – Frankie's Friends

Why are veterinary teams attending HQHVSN training?

Many clinics want to increase access to feline desexing but face challenges such as limited surgical capacity, staffing pressures and increasing client demand. HQHVSN techniques help veterinary teams safely perform desexing procedures more efficiently while maintaining high standards of patient care. Benefits include:

-  Increase surgical capacity
-  Reduce anaesthetic and surgery times
-  Better utilise veterinary nurses and support staff
-  Improve practice efficiency
-  Increase access to affordable desexing
-  Support community animal welfare outcomes
